ABOUT ME

I'm Oğuz, a former student of electrical engineering who discovered a passion for programming while studying. My journey began with learning C and C++ during my time in university, where I found immense joy in software development. Subsequently, I made the bold decision to transition into the web development sphere, which led me to depart from my university education. In pursuit of becoming a proficient web developer, I devoted myself to self-directed learning and skill enhancement. Through various Udemey courses and acquiring certifications, I deepened my understanding of web technologies. I supplemented theoretical knowledge with practical application, constructing a diverse portfolio of projects that showcased my capabilities. By combining theoretical insights with hands-on experience, I solidified my expertise in web development. I am now adept at creating dynamic and visually appealing websites, driven by a blend of creativity and technical proficiency. I am eager to leverage my skills and passion for web development to contribute effectively to your team and contribute to meaningful projects.
